29th Sunday in Ordinary Time

Scripture: Isaiah 45:1, 4-6; 1 Thessalonians 1:1-5b; Matthew 22:15-21

As the Catechism of the Catholic Church teaches, the faithful are called to live in the world but not be of the world. We are called to be responsible stewards, contributing to the common good while giving God our hearts, minds, and souls. However, we have often reversed this order, offering our hearts to created things and giving only lip service to God. We have placed wealth, power and status above Him. Let us render our hearts to God alone.

Today's Gospel presents a significant moment between Jesus and the Pharisees, showing the tension between our duties as citizens and our spiritual obligations. The Pharisees try to trap Jesus with a question about paying taxes to Caesar, hoping to catch Him in a mistake. But Jesus responds with great wisdom saying, "Give to Caesar what is Caesar's, and to God what is God's." As individuals and families, we have two important responsibilities: one to society and one to God. We must respect and follow the laws of the land, including paying taxes, which are meant to improve the lives of citizens. At the same time, our ultimate loyalty belongs to God, the source of all authority. The First Reading reminds us that the Lord is our God, and there is no other God beside Him. St. Paul also reminds us that God loves us and has chosen us. Our actions as good citizens should reflect our devotion to God, and our commitment to God should guide how we live as responsible citizens. This Mission Sunday challenges us to reach out to others with compassion, love and service, just as Jesus did. We are called to share the gift of our faith, hope and love generously. As Pope Francis reminds us, "Every Christian is a missionary to the world, called to bring the love and joy of the Gospel to everyone."
